Marathon Petroleum Hiring Personnel,

I have decided to apply to for the Information Technology internship in hopes of gaining real world experience that will enhance my ability to be successful down the road.

Although I am only a freshman in college, I have had the opportunity to get my feet wet in a wide variety of IT-related fields. I first started programming when I was a sophomore in high school, with C++ being my first and favorite language. Since then, I have taken courses in C#, HTML, and CSS. Not only have I learned the theoretical side of these languages, but I have applied them in a practical setting as well.

My sophomore year, I learned how to integrate C++ with Arduino microcontrollers in my robotics class. We later competed in the National Robotics Competition, and my team used C++ to program our robot, taking second in our competition. This past semester at Ohio Northern, I participated in a research project in which my ACM chapter was tasked with building infrared temperature sensors as a COVID-19 symptom detection system. A sample of my HTML/CSS skills can also be found by following my website link to the left in the side bar.

I recognize that I have barely even scratched the surface of this ever-expanding world of technology and that I have a great deal of information yet to learn. In my eyes, this only underscores the importance of getting hands-on training in an IT-related field. I would be honored to interview for the position, and I would like to thank you for your consideration.

Best Regards,
Elijah Weber
